

Acknowledgments

Like most agricultural products, Ag Help Wanted comes from the hands and minds of many people, only some of whom are identified on the title page, the source attributions on text pages, and the list of references. The authors are grateful not only to collaborators who worked with the manuscript but also to associates who contributed specific ideas, background knowledge, and other vital support to this enterprise.

Our efforts drew inspiration and draft material from the British Columbia Farm Employers' Handbook (1993), preparation of which was led by Lorne Owen at the B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The structure and content of the Canadian publication served as touchstones for development of this book from its very beginning. Insightful reviews of a version in progress were provided by Rob Cartwright, Mike Gempler, Wayne Howard, Guadalupe Sandoval, and Chris Wilcox. We are indebted to them for observations and recommendations that brought about significant improvements in the text.

Clarity, readability, and attractiveness of presentation owe much to a superb production team. Betsey Tabraham edited chapter drafts, devised the basic text format, and pored over final copy with a singularly keen eye. Nancy Bannister heroically and judiciously edited two chapters at a critical stage. Joleen Hofferber refined chapter files through rounds of revision. Tonya Talbert copy edited the near-final manuscript as a whole. Tana Stith designed the cover and laid out all text and pictures into print-ready form. Marcia Griffin and Noreen Wong pitched in with additional clerical assistance. Thank you all.

Much less direct but no less meaningful contributions to this book have been made by a multitude of agricultural employers, hired managers, field workers, association leaders, industry service professionals, public agency staff, and academic colleagues. Most of the examples and illustrations in chapters derive from personal stories that individuals have shared with me over the years. Of course, neither they nor I suspected at the time that their practical experiences, vexing problems, ingenious solutions, and accumulated wisdom were to fuel Ag Help Wanted. Far more people than the page can accommodate or my memory can conjure deserve mention for adding to this project in obvious and subtle ways. While recognizing that the book rests also on the support of many not named here, and at the risk of perplexing those who are, I extend special appreciation to Edward Agundez, Zach Berkowitz, Gregory Encina Billikopf, Ellen Brokaw, Richard Bruce, Ralph DeLeon, Kai Francisco, Refugio Gonzales, Floyd Griffin, Sumi Higaki, Gary Johnston, Roger Kerneur, Jack Lloyd, Al Macias, Charles Magnuson, John Mamer, Richard Malkin, Chris Nelson, Larry Silva, George Strauss, Stephen Sutter, Craig Thompson, and Norma Turner.

Three organizations generously granted us funds to make possible the development of this book and its companion website as a regional project serving multi-state clientele. We are most grateful to the Farm Foundation, the USDA Risk Management Agency, and the Western Center for Risk Management Education for financial support as well as for their leaders' understanding the applicability of this work across a broad range of agricultural operations.

Howard R. Rosenberg
August 2002